Geoengineering Whistleblower Interview with Kristen Meghan

06.07.2024 | www.kla.tv/29651

Daniel: So we're here with Kristen Meghan. She's a military veteran, right?

Kristen Meghan: Yes, I was in the U. S. Air Force for nine years.

Daniel: Wow. And you came out and blew the whistle on geoengineering things that you witnessed to be going on. Can you give us the real nutshell?

Kristen Meghan: Absolutely. Basically, I had heard of what many people know as the term chemtrails, and I worked in a job called bioenvironmental engineering, and I figured I thought that was insane, and why would we do something like that, modify the weather by using hazardous materials in our atmosphere? So, actually in the process of trying to debunk it or disprove it, I realized, it was coming right out of my office as I was one of the people that was approving the chemicals. And it really shook the core of my oath, and I did a lot of sampling, did a lot of investigation, and I blew the whistle, and I got out, and I've now used my credentials, my oath, and my powers for good to help people understand it's very real. It's now openly admitted. There are multiple forms of weather modification. I specifically found the one of stratospheric aerosol injection, and collectively around the globe, we have to understand that it is now being admitted because they're saying it's combating climate change. Well, the climate change we need to be worried about is man-made climate engineering, also known as geoengineering.

Daniel: And when you say they had chemicals being pumped into the air, what kind of chemicals are they putting out that rain down on humanity, basically?

Kristen Meghan: Nanoparticulate metals, like, you had different sulphates and barium and strontium. I know it's probably changed over time. I know they use silver iodide for certain things. But these are, the odd part of it was the quantities that I saw them coming in, the form that they were coming in, and it's the same type of materials that I was trying to engineer out of the workplace to substitute with safer materials. And when you notice that the, what's called the safety data sheet, the information about a chemical of what personal protective equipment to wear, how do you dispose of it, how do you pack it to ship it, when key information, when information is missing, I ask questions. And my questions led to demonization, and I knew that I found something I shouldn't have Daniel: That's insane. So, these metals are basically toxic for the humans, I would presume, or?

Kristen Meghan: Yes, because it also has aluminium. And a lot of people will tell you, well, these things aren't horrible in small quantities. It's not small quantities, because when you are putting things above us, the dissipation rates are dependent on weather and climate but it's getting into the food, it's getting into the soil. And around the world, these wastewater treatment plants, when it comes to pharmaceuticals or these toxicants, is what they're called, they are not able to filter them out.

So, if you're growing organic food, you know, are we going to go back to the plexiglass barriers on our plants? I mean, it's horrible. That's why you can ban it anywhere. We've had states in the United States ban it, and that is great to get the ball rolling, but people really need to wake up to it, irrespective of any political party. It's not okay. And you're seeing a huge increase in neurodegenerative issues, like Alzheimer's. It's difficult for people with respiratory issues and asthma, and people are wondering why they have allergies 24 -7- 365.

Daniel: And I liked what you said about that climate change or the change we experience in weather. Often, we can't disconnect that from these geoengineering activities.

Do you want to say something more about that? I mean, how do we feel that? Is there proof that it is definitely coming from that?

Kristen Meghan: Yes, there are places that openly admitted it. Remember Dubai? And then when people got upset, they retracted it, but the can was already opened. And the issue is, I know this sounds silly, but when you watch movies with time change, they say if you do something and something changes, it changes the ripple throughout time. If you are modifying the weather, you are messing with Mother Nature. And meteorology is a very, very thorough study, and I do know a lot of it because of my profession of plotting hazards, but it does not make sense when you are altering nature where things are not naturally supposed to occur. We had massive flooding in California, and we have a system called HAARP that is in the United States. And the same people who demonized me five, ten years ago are now going, wow, because they're finding it's openly admitted in all of our U. S. documents. The U. S. is not the only country doing it.

Daniel: Wow, that's crazy. Well, thank you very much for coming out on that and letting humanity know what's going on. Thank you so much, Kristen.

Kristen Meghan: Thank you.

Tennessee USA Bans Geoengineering – European Media are silent

Leading media very quickly attribute unusual weather events such as heavy rainfall with flooding to climate change and global warming. However, when individual countries pass laws against geoengineering and chemtrails - not without reason - the same media either do not report on it at all or relegate such interesting developments to the realm of conspiracy myths. Kla.TV brings clarity to weather events!

The US state of Tennessee has passed a new law banning geoengineering and chemtrail activities in the state. On March 18, 2024, the Senate voted 25 to 6 in
